

Principals' Institute for Technology Leadership

A partnership between the Taconic Hills Central School District and Questar III Model Schools

Session II: Principal Leadership in Technology Planning

Description:

The principal is the lynchpin of school technology integration. Without principal leadership and advocacy, the power of technology to improve instruction is limited to a few pioneer teachers. However, principals require access to ongoing professional development and networking among peers in order to be effective technology planners and instructional leaders.

The goal of these October sessions is to help Questar III Model Schools principals become more effective leaders in building-level technology integration and planning, and includes membership in a growing county-wide list-serve of building level technology leaders.

This session is open to new registrants. This past summer's sessions focused on principal technology leadership (building a culture of technology use, knowing classroom integration models, and using electronic communication more effectively). That session will be repeated next summer, and its outline and materials will be available online shortly.
